8. a) We know that tea is very popular, because of the fact (as said by Rajvir) that eighty crore cups of tea are drunk everyday throughout the world. So, it shows that tea is drunk in other places, other than India, and that many people love it too.

b) Rajvir was also a great fan of reading detective stories. He didn’t like to read at the moment because he wanted to see and admire the fields and scenery outside the train. Unlike Rajiv, who was born and brought up in a plantation, Rajvir had never seen so much greenery in his life.

c) The word ‘keener’ means ‘to be more interested’.

d) When Maxwell took Mijbil to the bathroom, Mijbil got very excited. Mijbil plunged into the water and jumped up and down along the length of the bathtub. He clived it into the bathtub and splashed water like a hippo. This shows that Mijbil was fond of water. Later on, it was discovered by Maxwell, that others felt that water should always be kept on the move. If there was a bowl of water, it had to be unpursued and if that is not possible, then the other had to jump into it and splash it around. Water kept static is wasted and propping.
so, Nijpi played in the bathtub for half an hour, hitting and splashing the water everywhere.

6) When the desire to ride the bus became very strong in Valli’s mind, she decided to do so. For this, she listened to conversations between neighbours and regular users of the bus. She found out that the town was six miles away from her village, and it takes forty-five minutes to reach town. The price for one ticket was 30 paise, and if she sat in the same bus and paid another 30 paise, she could return to her street. She calculated that she could take the bus at one, when her mother would take a nap after lunch, and reach back by two forty-five. She saved with determination, the money she got. She calculated and recalculated, planned and replanned. After all this, she decided to go for a ride in the bus. She also asked discreet questions to people who had travelled in the bus. This shows that Valli was a good planner.

7) After losing Mine Forestier’s necklace, the soisels decided to replace it. They found a similar necklace at Polons, Royal. It was priced at 40,000 francs, but they could get it for thirty-six thousand. M. Roisel possessed eighteen thousand francs, which his father had left him. The rest he borrowed from friends, and a whole race of money-lenders, making rumours promises. Finally, they collected enough money and placed it at the merchant's counter, and bought the necklace. Mme. Roisel gave it to Mme. Faucher, in order to repay the money. M. Roisel worked in the evenings and also placed some merchant's books for 5 sous per page. Mme. Roisel also helped in whichever way possible. She became a woman of the people, and in 10 years, they repaid the loans.

3. d) "Elsight was the only child of his mother. After his father's death when he was in third grade, he was her whole life. She took him on trips, and bought him telescopes, microscopes, compasses, mounting materials and all that he needed for his experiments. If he didn't have anything to do, his mother found him something, not physical work but something to learn. In the night, they did things together on the dining table. When he almost lost his interest in butterfly, butterfly collection, his mother bought him a children's book, the Travels of Monarch X, which placed him on his path to success. Without his mother's support and encouragement, he perhaps would not have succeeded in life. His mother worked hard to do whatever possible to help Richard.

10. In the poem 'Animals', the poet, Walt Whitman, writes the reasons why animals are better than human beings. He mentions the various aspects in life, where we have failed and the animals have succeeded. No one is dissatisfied, not one is discontented with the manual of owning things'. This is one place where we have failed, when it comes to values.

We generally write about our condition. We, human beings, are not satisfied with whatever we have and we get, we always yearn for more. We always want to own more things. We want to earn more money and more respect in the society.

There are divisions in our society, like the rich and the poor. Animals, on the other hand, are not like this. They are satisfied with their condition, and they live for the present. They do not go about fighting with each other. There is no one who is 'more respectable' than them. Thus, there are many values that we need to learn from animals and imbibe for a happy life. We need to learn to be satisfied with our condition, forget our mistakes and live for the present. We should forget the divisions in our society, and learn to live in harmony. We need to realise money is not the only important thing in life. Humans should imbibe these values for a happy life.

The first story she heard from the Bible was about Joseph and his brothers. Her cousin and she were indoors, and Helen was bored. So, her cousin began to spell the story of Joseph into her hands. Her cousin told her how Jacob loved Joseph, and his brothers were jealous of him. Then they decided to sell him, and they took his coat to Jacob, and lied that Joseph was killed. Somewhere, the story failed to interest Helen. She thought maybe it was because she left it happened far away in Canaan. and story kind of artificial and repeated. However, after meeting Bishop Brooks, her attitude changed. Bishop Brooke taught her about the universal religion of love, and that if she loved the Father in Heaven and every child of God on Earth, then she had the key to heaven. Bishop Brooke taught her just two doctrines - Fatherhood of God and Brotherhood of man.

But after the death of Bishop, she began to seek to the Bible for spiritual guidance. She began to understand the meaning of the stories. 'She loved it as she loved no other book.' She especially loved Ruth and Esther, the two biblical lady heroes. She was moved by their characters. She was amazed at Esther's courage when she stood before the wicked Ahasuerus. She admired her thinking 'If I live, then my people shall also live.' Helen was also amazed by the patriotism of Ruth, how she looked after her mother-in-law. These two strong ladies strengthened Helen's relation with the Bible. Bishop Brooke had opened the door for Helen to attain the wisdom in the teachings of the Bible. She realized the importance of the Bible in her life. At first, she liked Greek stories more than the Bible. She thought it was perhaps because she had known many Greeks, whereas she didn't know a single Hebrew or Egyptian. However, she grew to love the Bible and held it close to her heart till the end of her life. The Bible taught her important values and helped her in understanding God and the important values in life. This is how Helen's attitude changed over time.
"Clean India" is a dream of all Indians. And thanks to our Prime Minister Honorable Narendra Modi, it has now been launched as a campaign to show that it is our responsibility. Linking this dream to the Father of our Nation’s name, it has succeeded in gaining even more support. ‘Swachh Bharat’ need not remain a dream anymore. It is the time to make it a reality.

‘Clean India’ programme relies largely on us, Indians. It is up to us to clean our country, our homeland. There are many things that we as citizens can do. We can join groups to organize these activities. These groups can set up bins at every kilometre and reuse in every village. The garbage is usually thrown by the sides of the roads. The piling up of garbage leads to foul smell, and breeding helps in the breeding of mosquitoes and other insects. Thus, it is necessary that these should be some place where everyone can deposit the garbage. So, setting up dustbins in every village and along the roadside will ensure safe disposal of waste. This will also promote... the disposal of waste chocolate wrappers, chips' packets and soft drink cans on the paths and pavements. These organisations, formed by concerned citizens, can ensure that the waste is collected from these bins on a regular basis, and deposited in waste processing units that incinerate these large waste disposal centres in the city, or urban areas, where the waste can be incinerated. Also, citizens can people can bury the biodegradable wastes and use the compost so formed for their kitchen gardens.

These are a few simple steps that we, as Indians, can take. It is our responsibility to clean India. It is our right to live in a clean country. But without acting, taking any action, we cannot achieve this. We are Indians. We are India. We need to strive for making India a cleaner and better place for the generations to come.

A 'Heavenly' Friendship

Once upon a time, there lived a parrot named Mithu. He was searching for a tree to build a nest in. After flying for a long time, Mithu became thirsty. He looked around for water in the forest, but he couldn't find any. Suddenly, he saw a rabbit. He called to the rabbit, "Dear rabbit, do you know where I could find some water?"
The rabbit replied, "Oh yes, just go straight and turn right when you see a huge mango tree. The river is in front of that tree." Mithu thanked the rabbit, and soon found the river. He drank some water. Then he observed the mango tree. "The tree is near the river, and it is also huge enough to protect me if it rains," thought Mithu. So he asked the tree, "O Mighty Mango Tree, can I build my nest on your branches?" The mango tree was very happy, because it felt very lonely before, and replied, "sure passot, and you can eat my mangoes too." Mithu was also very happy.
He built the nest and the tree and Mithu became good friends. Mithu married and had two children.

Two years later, the tree fell sick and died. It dried up. There was nothing to eat and its leaves fell. It also fell off. But Mithu didn't leave. He wanted to remain with his friend. So, he was still happy and contented, and he decided to stay on. Lord Indra noticed this friendship from heaven, and decided to test the passot's loyalty. He flies down in the form of a swan. He meets Mithu, sitting on the tree, and said, "Meanwhile, Mithu married and brought He meets Mithu and his family, sitting on the tree, and said, "Oh Passot, these is nothing on your tree. Your family may starve. Come and join me on my tree." But Mithu said, "No, all these days this tree has fed my family and me. It was with us in good days and we will stay with him in his bad days. We can get food from nearby trees."

Indra was pleased. He turned into his godly form and said, "Purnet, your loyalty has pleased me. So, I will grant you one wish. What is it that you want?"

Mithu was overjoyed and said, "O lord! Can you bring my friend, the tree, back to life?"

Lord Indra said, "And so it shall be done." The tree became strong again. Mithu and his family were very happy, and so was the tree. They all lived happily ever after.
